Watercolor West to Sponsor Annual Demonstration Series

This may be the best 'art education bargain' around. At only $20 per session for a 4-5 hour demo, it's hard to beat. I've attended numerous sessions and have found them to be worth much, much more than the fee.

Don Markofski

Every year, in conjunction with the annual international exhibition, Watercolor West invites several well-known watercolor artists to give seminars or demonstrations.

The seminars are about the work of the featured artist. The artist will discuss his or her work, answer questions and give a painting demonstration and sometimes a slide show. Seminars are held at the Brea Civic & Cultural Center and run from 10AM - 3PM, with a break for lunch.

Each demonstration is only $20. For additional information and registration flier contact the Brea Gallery at 714-990-7730. The Registration form is also available for downloading as PDF from the Watercolor West Website at the www.watercolorwest.org location.

YOUR Association Needs Help!

The efficient operation and management of YOUR ASSOCIATION is enjoyed by all members. Like most organizations, the people involved and volunteering their time to continue this process is a relatively small group. In the case of PVAA, that 'small group' seems to be shrinking even smaller. If you can help, we'd really appreciate it.

Fairplex Show Another Success

PVAA's Involvement in the show and sales of artwork had all the earmarks of another success. I talked to interesting 'fair folk' and had the pleasure of working with several fellow members I hadn't met before. Don Markofski

PVAA FEATURED MEMBER

Catherine Yu Lin

Catherine is a Taiwanese American artist. When she was five, her mother gave her a box of watercolor paint. She taught her the wonders and the fun of mixing colors; and from there on, Catherine knew she has a natural love for art. Her talent was recognized by school teachers, and at a young age, she represented her school in many art contests, in addition to winning many art competitions along the way. When she was eleven years old, she was recognized as “Artist of the City” by the Cultural Commission of her hometown, Taitung, Taiwan. Throughout her childhood and adolescent years, she won numerous art contests in her home country Taiwan as well as in the United States.

When she was in college, she saw it as her calling to pursue a degree in art, on top of other studies in diverse fields. She holds two bachelor degrees from UC Irvine – one in Studio Art and the other in Environmental Analysis and Design. During her time as an art student at UC Irvine, she continued to develop her skills as a painter while exploring other mediums such as photography, digital art, drawing, and ceramics. Her paintings and photograph works were featured in many group art shows. She also held her very first solo show on campus during her freshman year. After graduating from UC Irvine, she attended UCLA for a master degree in Urban Planning. Since graduation in 2004, she has been working full-time as an urban planner.

Although art is not her current career, she continues to cultivate her art by taking classes, workshops, and be in company of other artists. She does not believe in the self-taught approach.

Instead, she believes that an artist should always seek opportunities to learn from other artists. Therefore, in recent years, she has studied with California artists Steve Criqui, Kevin Appel, Steve Metzger, Lisa Mozzini-McDill, and very recently she started taking workshops in Joseph Todorovitch’s studio. She is a juried member of Women Painter West and Taiwanese American Art Association, as well as Pomona Art Association. Currently, she exhibits her paintings at Gallery Soho, a co-op gallery located in Pomona, California. She also exhibits her paintings twice annually with the Taiwanese American Association of Art, as well as other juried shows throughout Southern California.

In May 2008, her painting “Puzzle” was published by City of Los Angeles. In March 2010, she was invited to exhibit her art in her native country, Taiwan. In June 2010, she had a solo show at Coffee Gallery in Altadena, California. And in June 2011, she was a core artist as well as a co-curator of “Fomosart”, a show featuring emerging Taiwanese American artists.

Her recent works depict American natural landscape, her travels to different countries, as well as simple beautiful moments such as soft sunlight on the petal of a flower. She hopes her art can evoke awareness on ecological preservation and the daily blessings that we so often take for granted.

Catherine also enjoys music, traveling, camping, hiking, and trying good food. She is an avid opera fan and wishes to climb Machu Picchu with her husband someday soon. She also aspires to be a really good cook. Please visit Catherine’s website at catherineart.net for more of her work.
